

A: You might be looking for this article: Crayola's new Crayola Photogenic Technology puts the spotlight where you want it, on you, so you can create your own light show. A new camera app automatically snaps your photos, with simple geofilters, with or without your phone. These filters are precise enough for even the most amateur photographer to create amazing shots. A new colorizing tool gives your photos the look of old oil paintings. The Crays can also turn sketches and doodles into full-color renderings with InkSpace. Whether you're making a watercolor painting for your easel or making a 3D design for your MakerBot®, you can now work your magic using Crayola's new Crayola Photogenic Technology. Lightshow Lighting Create a lightshow using your phone's built-in camera. Simply take a photo, then instantly apply one of the millions of geofilters in the "Lightshow" geofilter pack. The filters allow you to change colors, shapes, and patterns, creating the appearance of rainbows, flames, and fireworks, and transforming your photo from ordinary to extraordinary. You can also create a more natural look by using a real photograph or even a sketch. It's up to you to decide how bright, how dark, and how much each filter and pattern impacts your photo. Colorizing & Artistic Rendering Crayola's new colorizing tool works with the camera app or directly with your phone's photo editor to give you a deep, beautiful, artistic look. It's easy to use, and from your phone, tablet, or desktop, you have access to your entire library of colored Crayons. InkSpace With Crayola's new ink-to-color technology, you can turn your sketches and doodles into the rich color renderings you've always wanted. When you upload your art to InkSpace (a free app that can be downloaded from the App Store or Google Play), you can quickly place your cursor over each object in your photo, then tap to change it to a Crayola color. Simple as that. MakerBot Bring your MakerBot™ Cricut to life with C
