A knowledge of XRD is a prerequisite for the success of the application of quantitative methods on the. 11 - 16.Where are we going? What is the purpose? How far is it? How to get there? These are all questions posed by the anonymous reader of the 18th century to the person who directed him or her through the streets of Paris and had the name of the street and house of his or her destination mentioned. It was probably a boy, about the same age as me, who found the letter I found in the back of a drawer at home. He had been directed through Paris by the city's postal carrier and used the city's closed-circuit system of delivery today. This is also the name of the character he or she identifies as the main character of "The System" The story begins with a man who has been assigned the task of directing people, who have no idea how to get to their destination. Just like the anonymous user of the 18th century, I am struggling to find a way to get from place to place I want to go. The question of how to get there would never occur to me, and I am thankful for the anonymous person in my 18th century home town who prompted me to ask. I am traveling by myself, and I want to find out where I am going without being directed from some unknown source. I am in the process of building a map of one of the towns I want to travel to and I want to know in advance how to get there. Our story begins when the man on the streets of Paris has met the anonymous reader and has described his or her instructions, and has been told the name of the street and house of his or her destination. The letter went through a postal system that has been closed for nearly 150 years and was dropped out of a tax cart delivered to me. I found the letter in the back of a drawer in my apartment, and the name on the envelope had been indecipherable. I thought it was "coza" and addressed it to my back yard. I was going to throw it out, but I did not want to leave it for someone else to find, so I decided to keep it for more than 20 years until now, and for the first time in that time I had a pen to
